The karambit | Fade is a rare and highly sought-after skin for the popular game CS:GO. Its popularity lies in its sleek design, unique animations, and attractive "Fade" finish, which sets it apart from other knife skins in the game. First introduced to CS2 11 years ago, the karambit has become an ultra-rare drop with a low estimated drop chance of just 0.26%. The skin can be obtained by opening one of the 11 containers that contain special cases or purchased on multiple markets at a price range between $2,699.99 and $2,861.93. The proportions of red, yellow, and blue are controlled by the gun's 'Pattern Index', with certain patterns featuring major red portions while others highlight yellow more prominently. This article delves into the world of Karambit Fade pattern indexes and their respective Fade percentage values to make it easier for readers to understand seed patterns and Fade percentages. A slider has been created to allow users to examine all Karambit Fade knives in detail, filtering them by Fade percentage values ranging from 80% to 100%. The slider enables users to view seed patterns alongside their ranks and search for specific patterns, making it intuitive to find desired information within seconds. The algorithm used is open-source and also employed by other popular third-party CS2 platforms. Certain Karambit Fade patterns have varying values based on their Fade percentage, with higher percentages generally resulting in greater value. For instance, a 100% seed pattern showcases the colors red, yellow, and purple perfectly, while an 80% pattern without yellow is valuable due to its predominantly red and purple blade. Users can input their Karambit Fade's seed pattern to determine its rank, Fade percentage, and other details.
